WAREHOUSE & STORAGE

Due to an ever-increasing need for space in today's world, the warehouse and storage industry has grown tremendously. With over 48,000 self-storage facilities in the U.S. today, these structures outnumber McDonald's and Starbucks locations combined. Additionally, the rise of e-commerce and demand for quick shipping requires larger, more automated warehouses that are closer to populated areas. Being within a day's drive of a considerable amount of the U.S. population, Pennsylvania alone has over 850 warehouses, totaling over 159 million square feet.

Whether your facility is built for self-storage or warehousing, Centurion understands the need to maximize rentable units and pallet positions while being sensitive to increasing demands for space efficiency and energy consciousness.

With our extensive experience building in this industry, we are prepared to implement the environmental controls and type of construction necessary for any project. Regarding space-planning and functionality, we collaborate with you to strategically optimize layout and plan for growth. It is critical to employ the most practical means and methods through design and construction for the greatest, economical capacity.
